Echo of our Campus

Behind unassuming bricks and glass doors that receive a mass assault only on Tuesday mornings and occasional Saturdays, what hidden drama lies? Rows of practice rooms hold perhaps . . . a frightened freshman in tears over a bad voice lesson . . . an after-hour's theory class, straining to guess the difference between a major triad and a diminished seventh . . . a frantic senior bruising her fingers on a Mozart sonata, with her recital looming three weeks away . . . downstairs hammers bang and odors of a speech class and what will be sets for a play . . . and outside all of it, seeing every tear and recognizing every tune by the thousand repetitions of the first line, walks Norman the janitor; scrubbing marble floors; listening to organs, pianos, violins, and voices that clamor like a tuning orchestra, all day long and well into the night.

Soft lights and gleaming candles enhance beauty of chancel in chapel.

Dedication . . .

"Well, now if I were you "

We remember a sincere friendliness that greeted us each September—we recall an interested expression of concern as we confided the things that troubled us—we remember patience that never complained at being awakened at odd hours for the pass key, or detained for conversation—we smile as we remember our pride in introducing such an attractive and charming person to our friends and parents—and with love in our hearts, we dedicate the 1957 ECHO to one who came to G. C. with us as freshmen, Mrs. Everett Mizell.

The Student Government Association, whose work and influence on campus goes frequently unseen, steps into the spotlight at given intervals. The cue for their public appearance is generally a need to be answered, such as the problem of the honor system or that traditional necessity, the student body meeting, or a particular occurrence which they hope to emphasize, such as events of state, national or international importance.

Confabs and discussions concerning the needs that could be answered by an honor system set the stage for this year. To unify and revitalize the aims of the association, the council also initiated this year a student government retreat, exclusive of all but elected members, judicial board and N. S. A. members. A mock election, the natural fruit of a political season, captured the attention of the campus in November, as the national event was stressed by local imitation.

The members of the council, by attending the regular meetings, called meetings, and committee meetings, and by performing innumerable jobs around campus, attempt to fulfill certain responsibilities. There is the responsibility of direction and correction, and of keeping local morale high, yet encouraging an ever-expanding horizon of interest. They must, in short, try to plan and uphold a way of life in the interest of the student body.

Barbara Hollowell, Secretary

Tyleta Williams
Chairman, Judicial Board

When the members of the student council select a new judicial board member from the rising junior class, they look for a girl who can fulfill rather rigid requirements. It is the duty of this board to enforce the regulations of the college; hence a member must perform the sometimes monotonous duty of checking in-and-out cards; she must have a sense of fair play and consider impartially all those who break a rule. She must not discuss proceedings of the meetings, and perhaps, most of all, she is required to set an example of good citizenship at all times.

Student Christian Fellowship

OFFICERS

Mae Braswell, Vice-President
Ruth Ann Jennette, Secretary
Susie Davis, Treasurer
Peggy Bradley, Campus Chest Chairman

Kay Greene
President, S. C. F.

The desire for an inter-denominational group to unite the smaller clans on campus, such as B. S. U. and M. S. M., culminated in the formation of the Student Christian Fellowship, to which all students are welcomed.

The S. C. F. cabinet members arrive on campus before school starts, to welcome the freshmen, sponsor a get-together for new students, and set in motion the plans for the year. Every Wednesday night, fellowship awaits any student interested enough to walk the distance to the hut. He can clap his hands to a combo beat, laugh at a skit, sing, argue, or follow many other S. C. F. planned programs. The semi-annual retreats elicit glowing reports of inspiration gained and shared, and of humorous incidents to be told and re-told. Another big event in the S. C. F. year is the Religious Emphasis Week programs during which the schedule of the campus is regulated around a guest speaker and dorm services. The Campus Chest Drive, with its accompanying auctions, skits, and frolics takes over for a week. A transfer picnic is held to comfort those students who are old hands at college life but freshmen to G. C.'s quirks. Programs, retreats, vespers, parties, and debates over school problems follow swiftly, marking another year in the life of this organization which is sometimes called the heartbeat of the college.

Athletic Association

Betty Joan Padley
President, A. A.

The Athletic Association is the stronghold of two important phases of campus life. One of its main functions is to keep alive the declining interest and emphasis on athletics that has been a result of the lack of adequate facilities. The volleyball, basketball, and softball tournaments between classes and between students and faculty, the swimming meets, the awarding of trophies, letters, and pins for outstanding achievement, the play day competition with other colleges, the sponsoring of the A. A. picnic, the Christmas Dance, and, largest of all, May Day—all these activities are responsible for the extent to which the school has remained athletic-conscious in spite of present handicaps. The other great responsibility of the Athletic Association is to aid the progress of the school toward providing sufficient support and facilities for athletics in the future. By keeping interest high in this vital phase of college life, the A. A. board is doing a commendable job in that direction.

Allen Kivett
President, M. S. G. A.

A Men's Student Government Association came to the G. C. campus for the first time in the college's long history. Rising from the need of harmony and co-operation on the campus, and for high ideals and forward motion for the men students, the M.S.G.A. became an instrument through which these aims were achieved. The job of constructing a constitution was placed into the hands of the judiciary board. After having provided the wheels to the men's organization by drawing up a constitution, the M.S.G.A. was ready to roll—the men students behind the organization with all their strength and force.

Men's Athletic Association

When a group of boys get together, they must find means to release their boundless energy through sports of one type or another. In keeping with the desire of both the college and the men students, a co-ordinated program of athletics was organized under the direction of Mr. Jack Nance of the Greensboro Y.M.C.A. There grew out of this program of tumbling, swimming, and volleyball a basketball team organized by the men students. With the aid of Mr. Nance and the college, the men purchased their own uniforms and went forth under the name of "Greensboro College" to compete in a schedule of games for the year.

Irving Society

MARSHALS

Seated: Dermid, Miller, Ausley, Branding, Morris, Flowers, Thompson.

President Doris Cloninger triumphs over great Irving Victory.

One of the most popular organizations on campus is the Irving Society. She is the older of the two societies on the campus and is enthusiastic in trying to uphold a spirit of friendliness and in stressing the social life on the campus. It is with love and pride that the members look on her colors of purple and gold and turn toward a full and brilliant future for her. The purple stands for loyalty, and gold represents the true worth of each Irving's heart. The enviable record made by the society on the campus has been the result of the customary granting of membership to the girls proving themselves worthy of the name "Irving."

Emerson Society

Sally Caton, Emerson President, muses over last minute preparations for Rush Week.

The organizing of a new society in 1890 was a stimulus to the girls of our college. It caused the girls to take a deeper interest and to be more loyal to their society. The loyalty of the Emersons is shown in the interest manifested by them and their willingness to perform whatever duties may be required of them. The Emersons offer students friendships that deepen and are recalled long after names and faces are forgotten. Each Emerson treasures membership in this society, and it is with admiration her banners of green and gold are cherished.

G. C. Players

The purpose of the Players is to establish a school behind and in front of the footlights so that students may take part either as actors or as stage warkers; to provide audiences with experimental productions written, staged, and acted by students; and to present plays worthy of the college and of the city of Greensboro. Under the direction of Dr. Mary-Braeme Parker, plays, which the members of the organization help select, are presented at intervals throughout the year and cast on the basis of competitive tryouts.

President Ann Long makes-up before opening night.

"The 13 Clocks"
February 24, 25, 1956

The lure of bright lights and greasepaint is legendary, and it affects all of us as the night for a play approaches. But the reality behind the fantasy is sometimes not so alluring. It means the serious work of many months before a performance can even be dreamed of; it means the insignificance of many hard working behind-the-scenesmen for the glory of a few hard working on-the-stagers. But show people are born and not made, and somehow becoming a Player is always worth it.

Glee Club

The Greensboro College Glee Club is made up of approximately sixty-five girls, both music and liberal arts students from all classes. This group, under the direction of Mr. E. L. Williams, provides special music on various occasions throughout the year. They present a Christmas Concert, a Spring Concert; they sing at local civic clubs, in Methodist churches, and concerts for servicemen on their annual tours.

Religious Education Club

In 1939, the first Religious Education Club (Theta Epsilon) was organized on this campus. Its purpose then, as now, was to interest its members in a study of and comparison between various religions. Later the club changed its name to the Raymond A. Smith Religious Education Club, and its membership was opened to all students who were interested in its programs.

Gamma Iota Sigma

Gamma Iota Sigma, formerly the Senior Honor Society, recognizes qualities in character, scholarship, and service, placing equal emphasis upon leadership in student activities. Members include juniors and seniors who have maintained an academic standing of ninety or above in every subject, and who have proved outstanding in in all areas of college life. The society emphasizes the importance of being a well-rounded individual rather than being merely crammed with information, as so many scholars have been in the past.

Junior Honor Society

Seated Hobson, Maness, President, Pettey, Hart. Standing Groom, Taylor, Cowan, Hester, Davis.

Having an honor society on our campus was fine, said the freshmen and sophomores a few years ago, but, after all, it was one which included only juniors and seniors. It was this fact which proved to be the determining factor in a movement to start a similar organization for the two lower classes.

The result, in 1939, was a Junior Honor Society, which has as its standard for membership a scholastic average of at least ninety and the possession of an estimable attitude. These girls deserve all the praise meted out to them, for they have had the foresight to realize that success in college begins from the first day and not the last year.

Future Teachers of America

The Future Teachers of America Club emphasizes high ideals and the qualities of dependable character and leadership. It is for the social and informative growth of all interested students who plan to teach. F. T. A. seeks to orient the student into his profession. The advisor for this group is Dr. Zelda Pemberton.

International Relations Club

Twice a month the International Relations Club meets to catch up on the most important up-to-date happenings in the world. Its purpose is to promote interest in world affairs and international relations with a view toward gaining world peace. In order to bring the United Nations closer to students on campus, special emphasis is placed on United Nations Week in October. Visiting speakers and students from the club who have traveled abroad or have done research work on a particular country present programs which add to the student's knowledge of the world about him.

Spanish Club

The Spanish Club provides interest for both beginning and advanced students of the language. While class-time is spent largely in learning techniques of the language, the club presents a lighter approach to Spanish culture.

The chief event on the club agenda is its annual Spanish supper. One afternoon each year the Hut kitchen smells of garlic, peppers, and seasonings, and, before long, plates of steaming chili emerge. After a delicious meal, the group settles back for, perhaps, some Spanish bingo or another similar game.

Through this fun and fellowship, Spanish becomes a living, working language, available to those who are interested.

Music Club

The Music Club was organized to encourage high professional standards among student musicians. Membership is open to all music majors and minors of high academic standing. Through student reports, conventions, guest artists and speakers, the club promotes a greater appreciation of music as an art form. Membership in the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs helps in acquainting the group with the opportunities, problems, and thrills of being a musician.

P. K. Club

The preachers' kids, shifted all their lives from leaving parsonage to leaving parsonage, settle uneasily at last for another four-year hitch. And feeling lonely without a congregation to satisfy, they pattern their club after the Methodist Annual Conference, complete with bishop, district superintendent, and minister for officers. They meet for the fun of recollecting similar experiences, and also for sponsoring charitable projects.

German Club

The German Club is open to all students taking German and to any other interested people. There are monthly meetings at which the group discusses German customs and people. The discussions are made more timely by contributions from German students who are studying in this country, and from others who have visited the country.

The knowledge which these students gain is the key to understanding and appreciation of a culture other than our own.

Cenezoic Club

The Cenezoic Club has as its members students interested in physics, chemistry or biology. The meetings are held once a month and the programs are concentrated on topics relating to science. Field trips are taken by the members if the occasion arises at which the answers or the points of interest are off campus, one of the trips being to the Biological Supply House in Guilford.

A highlight of the year is the meeting at which the Greensboro College Club plays host to American Chemical Society.

Standing Noland, Andrews, Miss Cole, Advisor, Miss Smith, Advisor, Lester. Seated Pritchard, President, Cox, Vice-President, Bryant, Cavanaugh, Kanipe, Secretary-Treasurer, Hester, Taylor.

Writer's Club

The Writer's Club is a rather loosely-put-together organization for people who like to write or who like to read the creative attempts of others. It is kept going by a co-ordinator who sees that there is a meeting periodically, by an unofficial kinship with the Lyre, and by promises of free coffee; but there are no officers and there is no membership roll. After an occasional business session where parliamentary procedure is thrown to the winds, the meetings settle into a reading of the work of some creator inspired by Spring or the demands of an English professor. Then while the author winces, a sometimes heated discussion informs him that his story is merely a sketch or that his poem is not a poem but a pageful of rhymed nonsense. And thus do writers grow wise and listeners brave.

G. C. Daughters

"Now when I went to G. C. . . ." That's a familiar phrase—one which every G. C. daughter has heard her mother or grandmother say over and over again. Times have changed, but the daughters still laugh at the same things and pull the same pranks as their elders once did. With the help of Misses Letha and Mary Brock, advisors, the club helps sponsor Class Day. The members greet and register the returning alumnae. Another highlight of each year is the annual chow mein dinner cooked by the girls themselves.

Social Life Committee

From making table assignments in the dining room to hiring bands to play for dances, the Social Life Committee is in constant touch with the entire student body. This group of girls is in charge of all social activities on campus, in co-ordination with the office of the Dean of Students. They suggest tentative dates for all dances and assist the dance sponsors in their work. With the goal of contributing to the wholesome living of students, this committee also prescribes dress for on-campus and off-campus activities and recommends standards of behavior throughout all areas of college life.

Math Club

A small club made up mostly of math majors and minors, but eligible to anyone interested, is the Math Club. Its main function is presenting the more interesting side of math. Discussions are held concerning the advantages of math in business, and in general, the ways that math can be put to work. The trip to the planetarium at Chapel Hill in the spring is an annual treat for the Math Club.

French is more than text-book grammar. It is music, art, literature, and people. The French Club functions as a medium through which students here may learn to appreciate another way of life and, at the same time, become more skillful in their own use of the language.

Speakers provide tales of picturesque country-side, of the solemnity of a Gothic cathedral, of common street scenes, of the typical dilemmas of a tourist. Other entertainment ranges from playing bingo and recognizing proverbs in French to learning one or two tunes of the French Hit Parade. This club is designed to emphasize the oneness possible in a divided world.

Freshmen Counselors are chosen by the vice-president of the student body from the various classes—from the sophomores who can still feel the chill of home-sickness around them to the seniors, eager to impart wisdom from a store of experiences accumulated during three years of trial-and-error struggles. Each counselor is assigned a number of girls whom she is to brief on hand-book regulations. Then for the first few weeks they stand guard, ready to usher the freshmen into the new world of college customs.

Chamber Orchestra

Several times this year the orchestra has been represented in our chapel programs and in evening recitals. Not only does the organization provide an opportunity for students to become familiar with some of the most famous orchestral literature, but also for outstanding performers in the student body and the faculty to be featured as soloists.

Besides participating in the orchestra itself, members who are interested may play with either string or woodwind ensembles. In such groups, both unity and individuality are necessary, calling forth the utmost in musicianship from all participants. This growth in interpretation of chamber music is vital to a thorough appreciation of music.

Hut Board

The Hut Board includes representatives from the three major organizations on campus, Student Council, SCF, and the Athletic Association. These girls are responsible for the general maintenance of the hut and its activities. They plan hut clean-ups and keep the equipment in working order.

The hut provides a place to spend leisure time, in playing cards or ping pong, or by watching TV. Magazines are in abundance, and the record player is always ready to produce good music for listening or dancing. Dating couples, with an eye for adventure, and groups who have a special favorite dish find the kitchen an excellent place to try their hands at cooking. And after a pleasant meal, an informal dance might be in store. A final touch to a perfect evening comes when coffee and donuts are served.

N. S. A.

Few of us realize the scope of the National Student's Association program. Elected by the student body, the chairman co-ordinates our campus activities with the national organization. She corresponds with the national organization and with other schools, exchanging information about N. S. A. activities on campus. N. S. A. works through several committees, helping on such projects as Help Day and Club Consolidation and working on problems of student government and budgets for student organizations. Not only is N. S. A. concerned with student affairs on our own campus or even in our own country; it also handles various international programs on campus and arranges summer travel abroad for G. C. students.

Music Education Club

Since the members of the Music Education Club are all planning to enter that field, their programs consist of things closely pertaining to music education. Groups go to high school and local concerts; members talk over their experiences in practice teaching; speakers are brought to the campus to talk about the phases of music in the public school. Occasionally, high school talent is sponsored by the Music Education Club. At such times, the meetings are open to anyone who is interested in hearing good vocal or instrumental ensembles from local schools. Also the group listens to records and learns specific things which will help them to interest their own students in music.

Chapel Choir

The Chapel Choir is composed of girls who enjoy singing for chapel services and other religious activities on campus. During the year, the choir participates in vesper services and special holiday features. A highlight of the year is the choir's annual tour through the halls at Christmas time. Under the capable direction of Barbara Reynolds, the Chapel Choir has increased greatly in number and popularity.

Home Economics Club

All Home Economic majors and minors are by virtue of their interest members of the Home Economics Club. In its meetings they find the opportunity to discuss informally the advantages and also the trials and tribulations which are offered by their chosen field. Consideration of Home Economics in the business field as well as in the home is stimulated by student planned programs or demonstrations, sometimes by professional people.

Day Students

Around 1930, a new organization called the Day Students' Association was formed. Later the name was changed to the Town Girls' Club, but then in 1955, when men were permitted as day students for the first time, the name was again changed to the Day Students' Association. Composed of approximately forty-five girls and boys, this organization holds parties, banquets, a formal tea, and helps sponsor the Christmas Dance each year. The purpose of this group is to develop school spirit and to interest the day students in campus activities.

Psychology Club

A new club has appeared on the G. C. campus this year. Under the sponsorship of Dr. John Hornaday, the Psychology Club has provided an opportunity for hearing well-known people representing various phases of the field.

The purpose of the club is to bring psychologists to the campus as speakers and to generally advance the range of psychological knowledge of its members. Membership is composed not only of G. C. students but also includes townspeople interested in psychology. Talks this year have included discussion of emotionally induced illness, measurement of interest, and extra-sensory perception.

The Echo 1957

Nellie Allen, Associate Editor
 "Any similarity between the Echo and any other annual is coincidental!"

Top secret meetings marked the blueprinting of the 1957 Echo. Hush-hush plans were announced that were to result in the unveiling of a revolutionary new annual. To bolster the courage of the staff, and to insure privacy, Mr. Harrell agreed to let the staff have a room of its own. The sign, ECHO, went up on the door of the freshly painted room, and the work began. Assignments were made to each of the staff members, corrections to the assignments followed, then re-assignments; people were chased down and interviewed; people were led by the hand to have their pictures made—only to see the same hand outstretched as money was collected; an "Echo meeting at 4:00" began to stir staff members to last minute bursts of work. Nellie and Betty fretted over the pictures and copy, while Julia checked and re-checked funds. Virginia harassed the typists, and Ja Gourley muttered to herself "a short, witty saying, a short, witty saying," as she tried to write captions. Finally the deadline arrived, and all the copy had been packaged, marked, and mailed. The leg and brain work were done, and the only task remaining was that of waiting and hoping that the students would look at the new annual, and smile as they heard the echo of their year.

The Collegian

The story behind the Collegians that appear so regularly every other Friday night is a long one. It begins all over again as soon as each new paper is safely back from the printer's and distributed. In the beginning, there is a long session at Mrs. Mac's, where Lucy Ann, Sara Bett, Ann, and Jo gather to drink coffee, discuss, suggest, and rack their brains for new ideas, new approaches, and new news. The next step comes in staff meeting, when the dangling participles and typographical errors of the preceding issue are bemoaned, assignments are given, and reporters dismissed with the usual admonitions to "make it long and get it in on time." Then all too soon the deadline approaches and there are frantic arrangements of interviews, bitings of pencils, and trips to plead for midnight typing jobs. Amazingly, the stories are handed in reasonably near the proper hour, words are counted, divided, inches computed, pages made up, headlines squeezed into just so much space. Countless trips are made to the printer's, proof read, stories cut or hurriedly padded, tempers lost. Then there is a sudden quiet, the thud of a heavy package at the switchboard, and the paper is out.

The Lyre

Lyre, the new fine arts magazine, had its genesis in the desire of students to share with the public the creative work of fellow members of the G. C. student body. The desire sprang first from the discovery that such work was being done and displayed in private groups. It gained momentum with the observation, by faculty members and interested observers, that the creative work at G. C. is of a high quality and deserves publication.

There were several handicaps to be overcome, the major one the fear on the part of many that the student body at large would not support an artistic publication. However, students seemed to be in favor of the magazine. Armed with only moral support, an editorial board started the quest for a name to dignify the project and emerged from a contest bearing the banner Lyre.

Twenty years ago a fine arts magazine was published on campus and was smothered by deadly student apathy. Plans have been made to continue the present publication. The hope of the staff is to publish the Lyre twice a year, with the belief that it will stimulate student interest in music, art, and literature, and that it will bring pride to a student body that newly recognizes the ability that it has hidden within its ranks.

Publications Board

Nobody understands the rigors of putting things in print so well as the people who have them printed. The combined heads of all the campus publications—annual, newspaper, magazine, and handbook—along with advisors from faculty and administration and representatives from each of the four staffs, tackle the manifold problems of finance, policy, and efficient management. And somehow they always manage to meet their deadlines, pay their bills, and provide the students with original and up-to-date reading matter.

Sara Bett Wheatley, State News Release Correspondent, Jo Wright, Greensboro Record Correspondent, Ann Ivey, Greensboro Daily News Correspondent

THE PRESS CLUB handles a large job—that of getting school news to the public. In return for a very small paycheck, these girls meet with an advisor, decide on what news should go out, see that pictures are taken, and trudge to the newspaper office several times a week with their stories. Because of these girls, G. C. constantly remains in the public eye.

THE HANDBOOK is a source of information to all G. C. students. The answers to nearly all questions can be found somewhere in its contents. Through it, students are informed of activities and organizations on campus. Our handbook is dedicated to the incoming students so that it will be a guide to a wholesome and valuable college life.

Seniors Echo Four Years

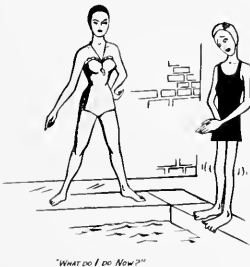

Too well I remember the confusion and loneliness I felt that first day at G. C. Our rooms in Main were bare and high ceilinged, and I couldn't go home for six weeks. Several incidents were especially important to me that year—remembered more vividly because my newness gave added emphasis to every occurrence. There was the day I reached an eager hand into my post office box to withdraw a card with the advice, "Stick with the Irvings, they're tops!"—prelude to a hectic week. To my concern, Decision Night found me marching to dinner wearing a summer-white dress. The concern lessened, however, when I viewed the assortment of beige, off-white, and even pink dresses ranging from heavy cotton to low-cut lace. After dinner the tension grew as the Emersons and Irvings sang their songs. That night the Irving daughters shouted, sang, and cried their victory.

Six weeks later my bags were packed, my dirty clothes in a laundry bag, the excess stuffed into a pillowcase; and I was saying a happy "See you Manday!" to all my fellow pilgrims. It was the Freshman Exodus to the Land of Plenty—Home!

of two little sisters, who became my very closest friends. We watched a big hole grow out behind Main and listened to the seniors gripe because they weren't going to get to live in the new dorm. A good many of our girl friends got pinned, and a few came back from Christmas with diamonds. We were happy for them and sad for us. We began to panic as we watched the seniors completing all their preparations for graduation and realized that we were going to be holding the key positions before long. The idea of having boys attend as resident students was presented to us, and we didn't know what to do with it.

When our senior year opened, the student government, publications, and clubs seemed to need our attention; and the anticipated light senior load of classes was a laugh. Our new dorm was beyond our highest ex-

A Home Away From Home

The evening of the Freshman-Sophomore I felt my previous loneliness replaced by a certain tinge of pride as I showed my date the campus. I was beginning to feel a kinship with the life of the college. Sharing of good and bad times begat friends, who could understand hidden references, or a raised eyebrow, or a problem. When my grades came after first semester, I found many a sympathizer.

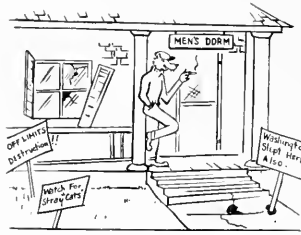

My mind skips lightly over my sophomore and junior years. Boys were admitted as day students, and it was encouraging to see some unattached men around. It's hard to explain the security found in being a saphomore and not being the most uninformed, inexperienced people on campus. We had to step down from our dignity only once—to go daisy picking. My first big assignment of my junior year was to look out for the welfare pectations, and we felt like lodgers in an exclusive hotel. We smoked and played bridge in our rooms, having an occasional pang of sorrow for the fellowship shared in Hudson's smoker. The unavoidable day arrived when practice teaching began, and the fear of not being able to face the children was second only to the fear of having to face the visit of the faculty. Caps and gowns, invitations, wedding plans, comprehensives—the college showed signs of being able to survive the shock of our graduation, so we made ready. Our little sisters put our caps and gowns on us, and the saphomores picked daisies for us. The annual came out with the seniors dominating the scene, and finally, the juniors planned a dance for us. We sang and played at our last G. C. Day. We talked to our advisors about jobs and to our parents about working away from home. All at once everything happened, and we were marching up on the stage to receive our diplomas. We shook hands with Dr. Hutsan, and then, turning our backs, we marched away from G. C.

Chain Of Memories

'Twas '57 at G. C.

We get so tired of caviar!

"Come on, baby, let the good times roll!"

It's time for Gunsmoke!

I know that I shall never see
A trumpet player quite like thee—
Whee!!

Now, why did she bid that?

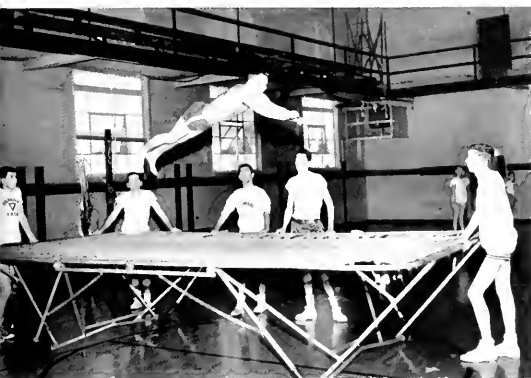

"I Could Have Danced All Night"

G. C. has many "foreign" students.

What goes up must come down—we hope.

Patio pose—pretty girls, handsome boys . . .

Growing Up With Opportunity

While you've been growing up and "getting educated", opportunity has been growing, too. All around you, industry and business have multiplied. Electrification has increased farm yield while cutting down on labor and risk.

When you were sophomores, the Duke Power Company was beginning new plants to supply your power needs after graduation. Now ample, low-priced power increases your job opportunity, and Piedmont resources are ready for your energy and ideas. Good luck to you as you find your place in the Piedmont Carolinas.

FUTURE

Opportunities today in the textile industry are truly unlimited. New man-made and natural fibers, with their almost limitless uses, are continually opening newer and broader fields for manufacturing, research and development, design and merchandising.

Burlington Industries, a young organization, which had its beginnings in North Carolina only 34 years ago, is today the world's leading textile concern.

Because of its broad diversification, Burlington offers to the young man or woman seeking a career in textiles truly unlimited opportunities in every phase of the textile field.
